THE BLACK BOX By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.

girl's voice. 'Are you there, James. . . Yes, am Lenora, Are you safe? Have you the jewels? • • • Where? • • • You are sure that you are safe? . . . No. nothing fresh has happened."

"You are at the hotel," Quest said softiy. "You are going to him." "I cannot sleep," she continued.

am coming to you." She set down the receiver. Quest lean ed a little more closely over her. "You know where the jewels are hid-den," he said. "Tell me where?" Her lips quivered. She made no answer. She turned uneasily in her chair. "Tell me the place?" Quest persisted. There was still no response from the girl. There were drops of perspiration on ner forehead. Quest shrugged his shoulders slightly.

"Very good," he concluded. "You need not tell me. Only remember this; At 9 o'clock tomorrow morning you will bring those jewels to this apartment.

GLOVERS, 613 22nd ST. N. W., Ph. W. 1129-Pri. lessons any hour, 50c. Fishwalk, one-etp. Hoston, Tango, Hesitation, etc. Class & dance, Tue., Thurs., Sat. eve., 50c. Ladies free. · * Rest quietly now. I want you to go to sleep.'

She obeyed without hesitation. Quest watched, for a moment, her regular breathing. Then he touched a bell by his side. Laura entered almost at once. Open the laboratory," Quest ordered. Then come back."

Without a word or a glance toward the sleeping figure, she obeyed him. It was a matter of seconds before she returney. Together they lifted and carried the sleeping girl out of the room, across the landing, into a larger apartment, the contents of which were wrapped in gloom and mystery. A single electric light was burning on the top of a square mirror fixed upon an easel. 'loward this they carried the girl and laid her in an easy chair almost opposite to it. +ne battery is just on the left,'

Lauro whispered. Quest nodded. Give me the band."

She turned away for a moment and disappeared in the shadows. When she returned, she carried a curved band of flexible steel. Quest took it from her. attached it by means of a coil of wire to the battery, and with firm, soft ingers slipped it on to Leonora's forehead. Then he stepped back. A rare emotion quivered in his tone. "She's a subject, Laura-I'm sure of it! Now for our great experiment!" They watched Lenora intently. Her face twitched uneasily, but she did not open her eyes and her breathing continued regular. Quest bent over her.

"Lenora," he said, slowly and firmly "your mind is full of one subject. You see your mistress in her chair by the fireside. She is toying with her diamonds. Look again. She lies there dead! Who was it entered the room, Lenora? Look! Look! Gaze into that mirror. What do you see there?"

The girl's eyes had opened. They were fixed now upon the mirror-distended, full of unholy things. Quest will de drop of perspiration from his forehead. "Try harder, Lenora," he muttered, his own breath laboring. "It is there in your brain! Look!"

Laura for the first time showed signs of emotion. She pointed toward the mirror. Quest was suddenly slient. He seemed to have turned into a figure of stone. For a single second the smooth surface of the mirror was obscured. A room erent dimly like a meture into be ing, a fire upon the hearth, a girl leaning back in her chair. A door in the background opened. A man stole out. He crept nearer to the giri-nis eyes fixed upon the diamonds, a thin, sirken cord twisted round his wrist. Studenty she saw him-too late! His hand was upon her lips, his face seemed to start almost from the mirror-then backness! . . . Lenora opened her eyes. She was still in the easy chair before the fire.

"Mr. Quest!" she reliered.

"Mr. Quest," she intered.

He looked up from some letters which he had been studying.
"I arm so sorry," he said pointely. "I really had forgotten that you were here.
But, you know that you have been to

She half rose to her feet. She was perplexed, uneasy.
"Asle-p?" she murmured. "Have 1?
And I dreamed a horrible dream! . . . Have I been ringing anyone up on the telephone?"

"Not that I know of," Quest assured
her. "As a matter of fact, I was called

her. "As a matter of fact, I was called downstairs to see one of my men soon after we got here."

"Can I go now," she asked.
"Certainly," Quest replied. "To tell you the truth, I find that I shall not need to ask you those questions, after all. A messenger from the police station has been here. He says they have come to the conclusion that a very well-known gang of New York criminals are in this thing. We know how to track in this thing. We know how to track them down all right,"

them down all right."
"I may go now, then?" she repeated, with immense relief.

Quest escorted the girl downstairs, opened the front door, blew his whistle, and his car pulled up at the door.
"Take this young lad,", he ordered,

"Take this young Lid", he ordered,
"wherever she wishes Good-night!"
The girl drove off. Quest watched the car disappear around the corner. Then he turned slowly and made preparations his adventure. " . * Proparations
'Number 700, New York." he muttered half an hour later as he left als house. "Beyond Fourteenth street—a tough neighborhood." He hesitated for a moment, feeling the articles in his overcost packet, a revolver in one, a small piece of hard substance in the other. Then he stepped stonce in the other. Then he stepped into his car, which had just returned.

"Where d'd you leave the young lady-" he asked the chatefleur.

"In Broadway, sir. She left me and boarded a cross-town car."

Quest nodded approvingly.

"No finesse," he sighed.

CHAPTER V.

ANFORD QUEST was naturally a person unaffected by presentiments or nervous fears of any sort, yet, having advanced a couple of yards along the hallway of the house which he had just entered without difficulty, he came to a standstill, oppressed with the sense of impending danger. With his electric torch be carefully surveyed the dllapidated staircase in front of him, the walls from which the paper hung down in depressing-looking strips. The house was to all appearance, uninhabited, The door had yielded easly to his master key. Yet this was the house connected with Number 700, New York, the house to which Lebora had come. Furthermore, from the street outside he had seen a light upon the first floor, Instantly extinguished as he had climbed the steps.

"Any one here?" he asked, raising his voice a little.

AN UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL

March 15, 1915.

Dear Sir-Sunday I am anxious to receive my "Sunday Evening Times." I enjoy the news, being a stranger in the city, I receive valuable information from the ads. Amrein's rates for ice cream were cheap and as I was wondering what to have for a party I phoned for some and some fancy cakes. The order was filled promptly, satisfactorily and I can highly recommend them to anyone. Yours truly,
